RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Emory University–Postdoctoral Fellow, 2005-06

Project administration for Susan G. Komen Foundation grants funding psychological services for breast cancer patients and their families at the Georgia Cancer Center for Excellence. Also prevention research for the Injury Free Coalition for Kids, a hospital-community coalition funded by grants from Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and Georgia Governor's Office Department of Highway Safety. Evaluated funding opportunities, wrote grant proposal content, prepared IRB applications, designed program evaluation studies, developed measures, conducted pilot testing and feasibility studies of evaluation tools, conducted data analyses (SPSS) and interpreted results, prepared conference presentations, and identified local and population-based injury surveillance resources. Research collaboration with Injury-Free Director Terri McFadden, MD, has continued after post-doc.

Virginia Tech – Graduate Research Assistant, Department of Psychology, 1995-2004

Extensive training and increasingly independent experience with all phases of behavioral research, under the expert mentorship of Jack Finney, Ph.D. Project conceptualization and design, institutional approval, participant recruitment and data collection, data analysis (SPSS), and interpretation and dissemination of findings, with programmatic focus on injury prevention and health promotion projects. Supervision and training of undergraduate research assistants, collaboration with community health agencies, program evaluation and consultation, as well as development of survey instruments, chart and behavioral coding systems, and research assistant training manuals.

University of Texas, Undergraduate Research Asst, Department of Psychology, 1990-1992 Assisted Caryn L. Carlson, Ph.D., with her research on Attention-Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder in children. Data collection, data entry, literature searches and reviews, clerical tasks.
